UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO DIVISION

AARON GREENSPAN,

Plaintiff,

v.

OMAR QAZI, SMICK ENTERPRISES, INC.,
ELON MUSK, and TESLA, INC.,

Defendants.

Case No. 3:20-cv-03426-JD

DECLARATION OF AARON
GREENSPAN IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFF'S REPLY IN SUPPORT OF EMERGENCY
MOTION FOR ORDER TO PRESERVE EVIDENCE

I, Aaron Greenspan, declare as follows:

1. On September 1, 2021 at 1:20 P.M., after the filing of my Emergency Motion For Order To Preserve Evidence, Omar Qazi sold his Tesla Model 3 to Warren Redlich, an attorney with a history of disciplinary disputes in the State of New York who is also a social media influencer focused on Tesla and Elon Musk, now based in Florida.

2. Through his @WholeMarsBlog account, Omar Qazi has repeatedly represented to the public that he was selling his car in order to file a new legal action against me and members of my family, not to finance his legal defense in this action or to pay for his basic living expenses, as he now claims. To the best of my knowledge, he wrote, "Selling to sue AG." and "It's going to be so satisfying to sue Aaron, his company, his charity, and it's [sic] board. 😊"

3. To the best of my knowledge, Omar Qazi indicated a lack of any acute financial stress by also writing, "By the way, the car sale isn't actually needed to counter sue Aaron."

4. As Exhibit A, I have attached a true and correct copy of the carsandbids.com auction page reflecting the sale of Omar Qazi's Tesla Model 3.

5. As Exhibit B, I have attached a true and correct copy of Omar Qazi's LinkedIn resume, showing his employment at BQE Software, Inc.

6. As Exhibit C, I have attached true and correct copies of the first page of each ProPublica Paycheck Protection Program federal loan database entry for BQE Software, Inc.

7. As Exhibit D, I have attached a true and correct copy of the @WholeMarsBlog Twitter account discussing the purchase of a Tesla Model X "for Dad" on August 11, 2021.

8. As Exhibit E, I have attached true and correct copies of select posts by the @WholeMarsBlog Twitter account discussing the supposed reason for the auction and sale of Omar Qazi's Tesla Model 3 from August 25, 2021 through August 31, 2021.

9. As Exhibit F, I have attached a true and correct copy of a March 31, 2019 article from The Drive entitled, "Unencrypted Video and Personal Data Stored on Teslas Raise Significant Privacy Concerns: Report" by Rob Stumpf.

10. In my declaration submitted to this Court on August 31, 2021 and docketed as ECF No. 134-1 in this action, I inadvertently overlooked a date on page 2, line 7. The date should have read August 31, 2021, not July 2, 2021.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the above statements are true and correct and that this declaration was executed on September 2, 2021 in San Francisco, California.

Doug's Take

We love Teslas here on Cars & Bids, and this is a particularly desirable one -- a 2018 Model 3 Long Range that boasts a ton of great Tesla features. As the trim level suggests, this one touts long-range battery capacity in addition to Tesla's Autopilot technology and a panoramic roof. This is a one-owner car that's spent its life in dry-climate California, and this one comes with a clean, accident-free Carfax report -- and evidently, Elon Musk signed the sun visor, which is a cool detail. The Model 3 is one of my favorite cars currently on sale, and I have a feeling the next owner will be thrilled with this one.

Highlights

THIS... is a 2018 Tesla Model 3 Long Range, finished in black with a black interior.

- The attached Carfax history report lists no accidents in this Model 3's past. It also shows that this is a one-owner car that's been exclusively registered in California.
- Factory equipment includes 18-inch wheels, a panoramic roof, wood interior trim, leather upholstery, a 15-inch touchscreen, a premium sound system, the Premium Connectivity Package, and Full Self-Driving Capability. The seller reports no modifications.

- Launched for 2018, the Tesla Model 3 was celebrated as a premium EV with a usable range and respectable performance, all at a reasonably attainable price. It's still available in 2021.
- Power for this Model 3 comes from an electric motor, which produces 271 horsepower and 307 lb-ft of torque. Connected to a 75-kWh lithium-ion battery pack, it zaps the rear wheels into motion. The Long Range version has an EPA-estimated driving range of up to 310 miles.

Equipment

- 18-inch wheels
- Panoramic roof
- Wood interior trim
- Leather upholstery
- Power-adjustable front seats
- Premium sound system
- 15-inch touchscreen
- Lifetime Free Premium Connectivity Package
- Premium Connectivity Package
- Autopilot technology
- Full Self-Driving Capability

Known Flaws

- Chips on the front end
- Some exterior scuffs and scratches
- Scratches on the wheels
- Some creases on the driver's seat's outer bolsters

Recent Service History

- Invoices pictured in the gallery show that this Model 3 received new tires in December 2020, and that it was ceramic coated in February 2019.
- The seller notes additional service history is available in the Tesla app.

Other Items Included in Sale

- 1 key
- Owner's manuals
- Charging cables

Ownership History

The seller purchased this Model 3 new in April 2018.

Seller Notes

The seller states Tesla co-founder and CEO Elon Musk signed this Model 3's passenger-side sun visor. He adds that Musk is shown signing the car in a video, and a photo of the signature is included in the gallery.

Q: Is there a way for you to confirm that the FSD is transferable to the next owner? I have read of cases where new owners are asked to pay for FSD on a M3 that the prior owner already paid for it ?

Re: BenBarreto Order one now and you'll get it delivered in January 2022(According to Tesla) and who knows, it could be delayed even more than that! Some people are not willing to wait 4+ months for a car they could readily buy and drive within a week.

Great car!!! Miss my early 2018 single motor Model 3. It had great build quality compared to the late 2018 models (quality slipped a bit during production hell ramp-up).

@SKGrowth you'll never get a solid answer from Tesla. Great cars, horrible communication. Can't ever get anyone on the phone. No one to email. All communication goes through the service section on the App. Cloak and Dagger kind of stuff. In fact once I stopped into the service department because the Dual Motor sticker was falling off our car and the guy there said 'just enter the info into the App'. We had to get one of the camera's replaced. The tech came to our house to do the work and only then was I able to get answers to my many questions. Great car though

By the way, the car sale isn't actually needed to counter sue Aaron.

We had an anonymous donor tell us that they're willing to contribute a large sum on the condition that it be used only to finance litigation against Aaron Greenspan & his board.

Finally, TSLAQ is on trial.

Aaron will be forced to turn over all kinds of documents revealing what was really going on behind the scenes of TSLAQ all these years.

He'll be forced to reveal the secrets he's been stalking and harassing Omar for years to hide.

Unencrypted Video and Personal Data Stored on Teslas Raise Significant Privacy Concerns: Report

Imagine crashing your car and someone blackmailing you with the footage later on.

As cars continue to become more advanced and stuffed full of technology, they've begun to catch the attention of security researchers. One analyst in particular recently purchased a salvaged Tesla Model 3 in order to conduct a series of tests, ultimately determining that the vehicle stores massive amounts of unencrypted personal data, accessible to any individual who has physical access to the car.

A researcher and self-proclaimed white hat hacker who goes by GreenTheOnly often takes advantage of Tesla's advantageous bug bounty program. The mutually beneficial strategy helps Tesla to patch serious security bugs while rewarding the researchers who find them with thousands of dollars in reward. Recently, the researcher spoke with CNBC under the condition of anonymity, showing just how much personal data he was able to extract from salvage vehicles.

The researcher and his colleague (who has bought and repaired hundreds of wrecked Tesla vehicles) recently purchased a salvage Model 3 found in a junkyard. The vehicle would be studied by GreenTheOnly, who was able to find an alarming amount of personal data left in the car after it had been hauled away for scrap.

Using information found in the car, the vehicle was able to be pinpointed back to its owner, a construction company based in the greater Boston area. The researchers were able to gather data stored by at least 17 different devices that had been connected to the car during its lifespan, none of which were encrypted. Data included 11 phonebooks' worth of contact information, calendar entries for the devices which paired, and even a series of email addresses. The researchers were also able to discover the last 73 locations which the driver(s) had navigated to.

But perhaps the most damning evidence found in the car was video of two separate crashes that occurred in the wrecked Model 3.

CAPTURE VIA CNBC

The first video showed the crash that finally brought the car to the salvage yard. The vehicle sped out of control and crashed into trees on the wrong side of the road. GPS and timestamp data was also included, showing the precise time and location of the crash.

But it gets deeper. Phone data from the time of the crash contained enough personally identifiable information to pinpoint who may have been in the car. A phone paired to the vehicle at the time happened to belong to a relative of the founder of the construction company who owned the Model 3, and incoming call logs showed that a family member had placed a call to the phone only moments before it had crashed.

A second video uncovered an earlier accident where the Model 3 sideswiped a guard rail. More video footage shows a general disregard for safety or the possibility that the person behind the wheel was driving while impaired.

VIA REDDIT

Limited data can be collected by any individual willing to purchase a set of EDR cables from Crash Data Group for $995. Raw data output can be collected with Tesla's EDR tool and then re-uploaded to Tesla's website in order to generate a basic EDR report (a sample of Tesla's report from a Model S can be found here). Video and other personal data can't be collected through this method and requires a more invasive approach.

One feature which Tesla owners enjoy is the car's recently updated Sentry Mode, a security-like application which enables event-based recording while a vehicle is parked. Specifically, the feature is meant to help capture vandals and prevent thefts. But, the cameras aren't just recording when using Sentry Mode. In fact, there's no way for owners to know just when their cameras—including the cabin-facing interior camera—is capturing video.

Tesla Model 3 video caught in sentry mode

Opting out of data collection isn't exactly as simple as one might think. Though possible, GreenTheOnly goes on to explain that one caveat of giving up data collection is also losing over-the-air software updates and other functionality which make Tesla's vehicles highly desirable to technology aficionados.

CHANNELS

Collected information also serves to benefit the automaker directly, protecting it against false claims of Autopilot crashes. Tesla has provided information regarding fatal crashes to the public, which allowed it to both dispel rumors and calm public opinion. Tesla has seen a decrease in use of its Advanced Driver Assistance System, Autopilot, following a recent high-profile crash. Though the data collection is important for the automaker to prevent the spread of incorrect information, it certainly raises the question of just what reasonable expectation of privacy drivers should have when owning a Tesla vehicle and opting in to data collection.

Tesla says that customers are ultimately responsible for the data stored on their cars. Should their vehicle be sold or otherwise disposed of, it's the automaker's belief that the owner should first factory reset their car.

"Tesla already offers options that customers can use to protect personal data stored on their car, including a factory reset option for deleting personal data and restoring customized settings to factory defaults, and a Valet Mode for hiding personal data (among other functions) when giving their keys to a valet," explained a Tesla spokesperson to CNBC. "That said, we are always committed to finding and improving upon the right balance between technical vehicle needs and the privacy of our customers."

Such is true with vehicles that the automaker sells through a popular dealer-only auctioneering service, Manheim. Another tipster from the auction company told CNBC that Tesla does not wipe customer data from cars which traverse its sales block, nor do the auction's employees. Manheim declined to comment on the validity of the claim.

The security of the data at Tesla has also been previously questioned. A publicly exposed kubernetes cluster operated by Tesla was compromised in 2018 and used to mine cryptocurrency; it was then found to be the same cluster used to house Autopilot data. In 2017, Tesla exposed a private key used by its maps server for more than a year and reportedly did not respond to reports of the vulnerability for more than two months before it was brought to public attention. There have also been reports of database dumps from Tesla, several of which include wireless networks and their corresponding passwords, all of which were stored in plain text.

Two former Tesla service employees also told CNBC that Tesla has a few built-in security features to flag customers who may have attempted to reverse-engineer their cars. Those who are flagged reportedly will not be prioritized to receive cutting-edge updates.

Still, knowing that any individual with the right skills can reveal the final moments of a car's life could be daunting. Things people prefer to keep private—where they go, who has been in the car, or how they drive—can be exposed to the public in the blink of an eye. Celebrities and high-profile individuals in particular could shift their views of the automaker's cars should they know that their personal data could be exposed. Even individuals who oft have nothing to hide tend to change their stance once the shoe is on the other foot.
